The history of the KUNST-WERKE BERLIN e. V.

Founded on July 1, 1991 by Klaus Biesenbach, Alexandra Binswanger, Philipp von Doering, Clemens Homburger, and Alfonso Rutigliano, KUNST-WERKE BERLIN e. V. put down roots in a derelict former margarine factory located on Auguststraße 69 in the Berlin-Mitte district. Through pivotal exhibitions, starting with the project 37 Räume (1992), artistic director Klaus Biesenbach positioned the KW Institute of Contemporary Art internationally. In 1996 a group around him founded the now internationally renowned Berlin Biennale for Contemporary Art, which first took place in 1998. In 2002, Gabriele Horn took over the directorship of the Berlin Biennale and from 2004 acted as the director of KW and the Berlin Biennale, which since have a joint support association. While Gabriele Horn remained director of the Berlin Biennale, Krist Gruijthuijsen succeeded her as new director of KW Institute for Contemporary Art in July 2016.

In its thirty years, KUNST-WERKE BERLIN e. V. has considerably shaped the development of contemporary art by critically examining current tendencies and discourses within society. Exhibitions, commissions, and multidisciplinary events, which feature distinctive collaborations with artists and institutions continue to underline and refine current focal points as part of a national and international discourse in arts and culture.

KW's national and international significance continuously grows, cemented by thematic shows as tekkno turns to sound of poetry (1995); Stand der Dinge (2000); Territories (2003); Zur Vorstellung des Terrors: Die RAF-Ausstellung (2005); Into Me / Out of Me (2006); One on One (2012/13); Fire and Forget. On Violence (2015); and The Making of Husbands: Christina Ramberg in Dialogue (2019/2020).

Many outstanding artists have presented significant solo exhibitions at KW, amongst which Absalon, Kader Attia, Kate Cooper, Keren Cytter, Anna Daučíková, Ceal Floyer, Cyprien Gaillard, Beatriz González, Douglas Gordon, Judith Hopf, Channa Horwitz, Carsten Höller, Lynn Hershman Leeson, Hanne Lippard, Renata Lucas, Hiwa K, Annette Kelm, Adam Pendleton, Mika Rottenberg, Christoph Schlingensiefel, Hassan Sharif, Anri Sala, Wael Shawky, Santiago Sierra, Ryan Trecartin and Lizzie Fitch, and Ian Wilson.

Over the years, the program of KW has been developed together with decisive curatorial voices, amongst others Anselm Franke, Susanne Pfeffer, Ellen Blumenstein, and Anna Gritz.
